 - 1. Reference is made to the following document:
 - D1: US 2003/114973 A1 (IKUMO HIROMICHI ET AL)
 19 June 2003 (2003-06-19).
 - The present application fails to satisfy the requirements of PCT Article 33(1) because the subject matter of claim 1 lacks novelty (PCT Article 33(2)).

Document D1 discloses (the references in parentheses are to said document (see figure 1)) a method for controlling a reversible seat-belt tensioner (7) for releasing a locking mechanism in a restraint belt system (6) in a motor vehicle (1), said locking mechanism being activated by an acceleration sensor (2, 3) and stopping the belt from being drawn, according to which method, after the belt tensioner (7) has been tensioned consequent upon the detection of a danger situation and the further detection of the end of the danger situation, the belt tensioner is controlled at a release time-point by means of a release signal (see figures 4 and 5, paragraphs [0086] to [0091]), in order to release the above locking mechanism from a locked state into a comfort state, said release time point being calculated using a sensor-model algorithm based on a model of the acceleration sensor and taking into account at least one variable characterising the dynamics of the vehicle's travel (see figures 6 and 7, paragraphs [0094] to [0100]).

2.1 Dependent claims 2 to 6 contain no features which, combined with the features of any claim to which they refer, meet the PCT requirements for novelty (PCT Article 33(2)). The reasons are as follows: the additional features of the following dependent claims are disclosed in document D1:

claim 4: see figure 1 and paragraph [0075].
